Myonex Acquired Creapharm's Clinical & Commercial Packaging and Bioservices Business Units to Expand Clinical Trial Supply Services and Gain of Foothold in Europe

As trial medications are tested and approved for patient trials, many drug development companies struggle to find a reliable full-suite packaging and labeling partner. Having an all-in-one service provider can streamline the development to patient timeline to allow for a quicker and more efficient process.

Creapharm Bio&Pharma ("Creapharm") has a unique position in the market with proficiency in the clinical packaging and distribution space, and the connections they have within the advanced therapy medicinal product (ATMP) supply chain. Along with this expertise, they bring with them new business opportunities with biospecimen storage and logistics, cryostorage, and commercial packaging. These capabilities made Creapharm the ideal partner for Myonex and the collaboration will create a more patient-centric business model where patient needs can be fulfilled efficiently and effectively.

Crosstree's extensive experience in the pharmaceutical development industry made the firm the ideal partner in assisting Myonex to develop their growth strategy. Leveraging its years of market expertise, the firm meticulously defined Myonex's strategic capability objectives and developed a growth trajectory through an intensive gap analysis. Crosstree then identified, profiled, and scored potential partners against Myonex's strategic goals, initiated bespoke outreach to validate qualifications, and ultimately identified Creapharm as the most synergistic partner. The resulting acquisition will allow Myonex to expand their clinical trial capabilities, as well as grow their presence globally.
